Introduction

The Indiana Senior Nutrition Program provides eligible persons with hot or otherwise appropriate, nutritionally balanced meals served at a specified meal site where surroundings promote social interaction and provide home delivered meals to those eligible persons in need of this service. In addition to meals, the program provides for individual nutrition assessments, nutrition education and may provide individual nutrition counseling.

The Indiana Division of Aging (IDA) a part of the Indiana Family and Social Services Administration administers the Indiana Senior Nutrition Program.

There are 16 Area Agencies on Aging, contracted by IDA to provide nutrition program services, including the administration of the individual congregate meal sites, and home delivered meals, throughout the State of Indiana. Enclosed is a map of the State of Indiana identifying the individual Service Areas (counties) for each of Indiana's sixteen Area Agencies on Aging.

Congregate Meal Sites This directory lists all of the congregate meal sites throughout the State of Indiana by the individual Area Agency on Aging. The meal sites are further broken down by county, by city and in the larger cities, by zip code.

Please contact the meal site directly for hours of operation. If the listed meal site does not have a telephone number, or for more information related to such issues as program eligibility, Home Delivered Meals, and voluntary meal contributions, please contact the individual Area Agency on Aging. The individual contact information is located at the top of each of the agency's pages.

Program Eligibility

Eligible Persons Include:

- A person over sixty years of age and their spouse of any age.

Other Eligible Persons May Include:

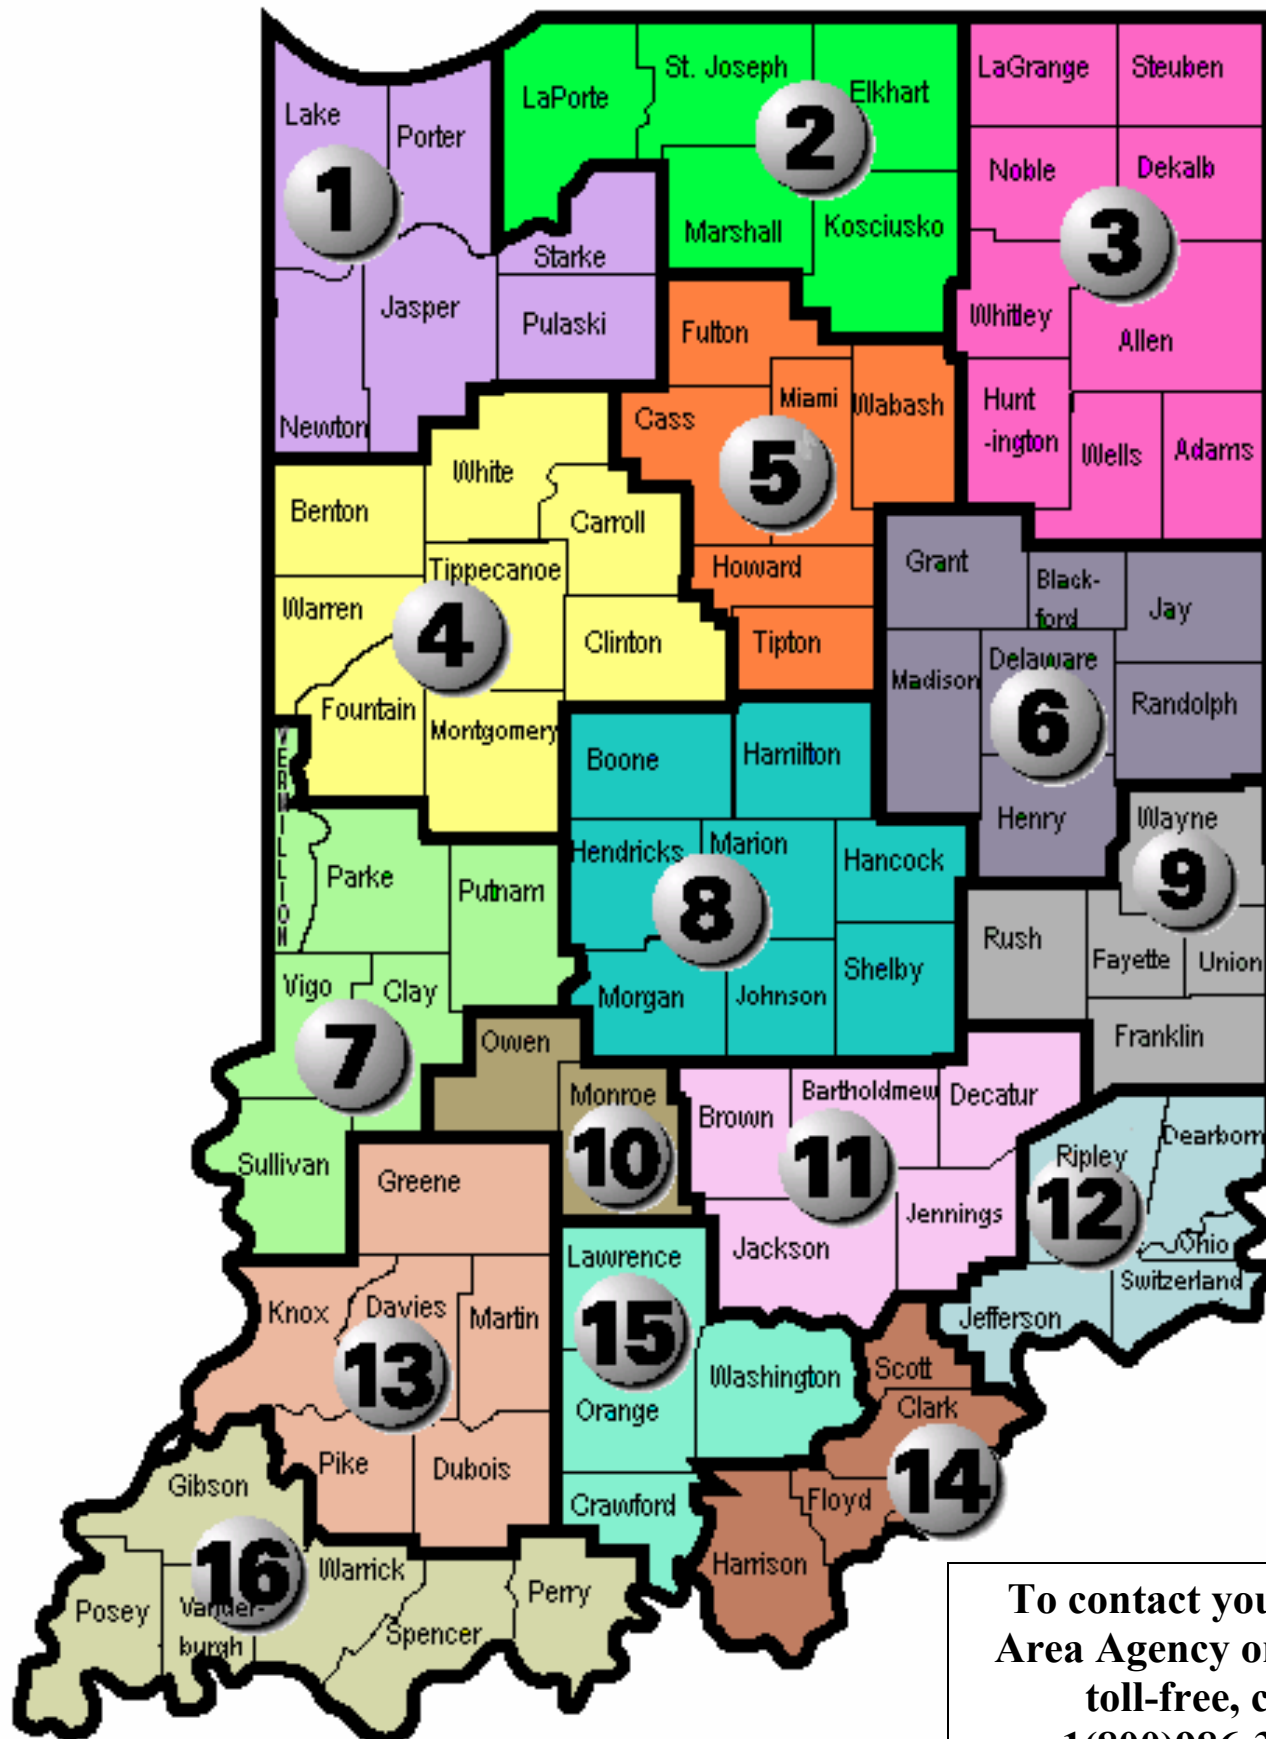

- a person with a disability who lives with and attends a meal site with an older person, or
- a person of any age with a disability living in a housing facility primarily occupied by older persons

Eligible persons are not charged any fee for the meals or related services. The Area Agency on Aging nutrition program, however, does provide each person the opportunity to voluntarily contribute to the cost of the meal/service.

Any contributions made by the participant to the Area Agency on Aging nutrition program are strictly voluntary. The Area Agency on Aging uses these contributions to help expand its nutrition program.
